Flynt Group Chosen to Assess Federal Energy Regulatory Committee Project

Kansas City, MO – February 11, 2008 – The Flynt Group, Inc., announced today that a major electric power and alternative energy concern retained it to conduct a comprehensive Threat and Vulnerability Assessment of a major Federal Energy Regulatory Committee (FERC) project consisting of multiple dams and hydroelectric power assets.

“The client approached Flynt Group to conduct analysis of this project due to its high profile with FERC and the need to present FERC with authoritative analysis addressing a full spectrum of threats from terrorists to insiders,” said Dr. Bill Flynt, CEO of the Flynt Group. “This is a large, geographically-dispersed complex system, which if attacked could have potential implications regionally and nationally. We are honored to have been sought out by the client based on our reputation and track record for delivering substantive analysis that exceeds Federal requirements regarding sophisticated threats targeting critical infrastructures.”
